This is the fifth year Northrop Grumman has provided scholarship funds, committing more than $250,000 in total scholarship funds over this period.

"We're making cyber education as accessible as possible by providing opportunities for a broad range of students because the best solutions to complex problems are developed by a highly diverse workforce," said Diane Miller, director, CyberPatriot programs, Northrop Grumman. "We are so proud of the students' accomplishments and are thrilled to be able to assist in helping tomorrow's cyber defenders further their education goals. We wish them continued success and look forward to their contribution to keeping our global networks safe."

"CyberPatriot has proven that it's got what it takes to generate excitement among students for a career in cybersecurity," said Sandra Evers-Manly, vice president, Global Corporate Responsibility and president of the Northrop Grumman Foundation. "AFA has been a phenomenal partner that's dedicated themselves to building a program that's spurring on a whole new generation of cyber pros to address a critical global need. Congratulations to everyone who participated; we challenge AFA to again break its own record and see even more students take-on the challenge in CyberPatriot VIII."

This year's CyberPatriot VII National Finals Competition featured 28 high school and middle school teams, representing the top one percent nationwide, who competed to defend virtual networks and mobile devices from a professional aggressor team. The competition drew a record 2,175 teams, a 40 percent increase over last year. There was representation from all 50 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Canada and U.S. Department of Defense Dependent Schools in both Europe and the Pacific.

In its fifth year as presenting sponsor, the Northrop Grumman Foundation and Northrop Grumman Corporation continue to devote time, talent and resources to support this critical STEM initiative. This month, the foundation extended its support through CyberPatriot XI (2019) with a $5.4 million grant to the AFA.
